

Overview of Final Presentation

What Will I Learn?

In this lesson, you will learn to:

- Organize the final oral presentation content in logical outline order
- Identify appropriate content for each part of the presentation
- Assign presentation roles to each group member

Why Learn It?

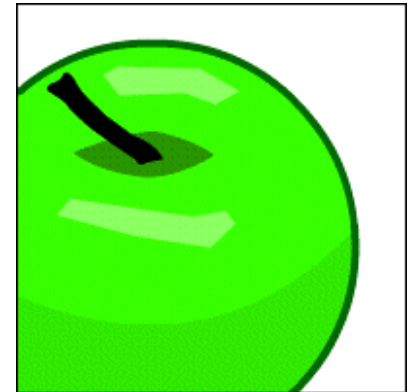

You want the presentation to have a logical flow and order. This makes it easier for the client to follow. A disjointed presentation can be confusing and frustrating for the audience.

Tell Me / Show Me

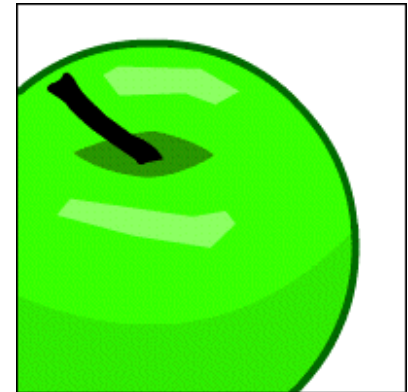

An outline helps you:

- Remember what needs to be said
- Keep your ideas organized and in proper sequence
- Keep to the subject
- Stay within the allotted time

Tell Me / Show Me

Determining the order also helps the group members to coordinate their presentation roles. No matter what you are doing as part of the presentation (speaking, drawing on the board, handing out documentation, etc.), you want the team to look organized and to function as smoothly as possible on presentation day.

Tell Me / Show Me

Here is a suggested order for the presentation:

1. Introduce the group members
2. State the business issue that you addressed
3. Present and explain the ERD (large enough for all to see)
4. Summarize how your solution will meet the client's needs

Tell Me / Show Me

Here is a suggested order for the presentation (continued):

5. Present written documentation (if applicable)
6. State assumptions that you made in creating your solution
7. Thank the clients for their time
8. Exit gracefully

Summary

In this lesson, you have learned to:

- Organize the final oral presentation content in logical outline order
- Identify appropriate content for each part of the presentation
- Assign presentation roles to each group member
